The Issue of Gathering New Forces in the Asia-Pacific Region: Impacts and Policy Implications for Vietnam

Nguyen Tat Thang, Nguyen Dinh Co, Chu Thanh Dung

Abstract: In recent years, the turbulence in the regional political situation, the change in the correlation of forces of major countries, the increase in competition in all fields of the two superpowers US and China have had a major impact on the gathering of forces in the Asia-Pacific region. In addition, regional conflict hotspots such as the Korean peninsula, Russia - Ukraine, East China Sea, Taiwan are also potential factors for the turning of the tide of gathering new forces in the region in the coming time. In this article, we make an in-depth analysis of the situation and the process of gathering new forces in the Asia-Pacific region with major directions such as: gathering of forces led by the US; gathering of forces led by China; as well as forces led by other countries and organizations, and some related issues. From these changes in the gathering of forces in the region, several issues arise and require Vietnam's policies and actions to adapt to the situation, take advantage of opportunities, and continue to promote cooperation, political stability, and economic development, while firmly protecting national sovereignty.

Nguyen Dinh Cuong

Abstract: Cultural diplomacy is one of the three pillars of modern Vietnamese diplomacy, and the implementation of cultural diplomacy has a strategic role, contributing to enhancing Vietnam's position and strength in the international arena. The article's focuses include our clarifications on the Communist Party of Vietnam's (CPV) views, guidelines and directions, as well as the State's policies and laws on the implementation of Vietnam's cultural diplomacy policy in the process of innovation and international integration. Accordingly, this article presents our analysis of the achievements and limitations as well as the causes of such achievements and limitations in the implementation of Vietnam's cultural diplomacy policy. At the same time, the author suggests a number of solutions to successfully carry out Vietnam's cultural diplomacy policy in the context of globalization, thereby affirming Vietnam's position and prestige in international relations.

Theoretical Basis for Building a Shared University Digital Library Model in Vietnam

Nguyen Thi Nhung

Abstract: Digital transformation in university libraries requires the interconnection and linking of libraries' shared data, which is a problem being posed for libraries in Vietnam. To ensure information resources for university libraries, building a shared university digital library is an important task. The establishment of a shared digital library model for Vietnamese universities should be based on the theoretical basis with concepts about model, shared resources, university library, digital library, shared university digital library as well as functions, principle characteristics and constituting elements of a university digital library. This article analyzed a number of models of independent digital libraries, linked digital libraries, collective digital libraries, and shared digital library models with centralized links, distributed links, and combined links as a basis for building a shared digital library model for Vietnamese universities.

Mapping Levels of Metaphors about War in English Political News

Luong Thi Phuong

Abstract: The study aims to systematically investigate the conceptual mapping structure of war-related metaphors in English discourse on political issues taken from the news articles in official websites of some Western countries where English is the first language including the UK, the US, and Australia. The research methodology is mainly qualitative analysis, which is specified by techniques such as discourse analysis, description, and classification. Besides, statistical analysis was also applied at some stages. As evidenced in the findings, war metaphor has a fairly rich conceptual mapping structure which represents the hierarchical conceptualisation of politics in English. Given the fact that the first level mapping is Politics as war, the research resulted in 3 derivative mappings, including: Elements in political activities as elements in war; Political activities as military activities; Political results as war results. On the basis of this mapping scheme, 8 third-level constituent mappings were generated. In light of cognitive theories, as well as the knowledge of embodied experience, the data is a result of the analysis and generalisations of the cognitive correlations between war entities, actions, activities and characteristics and those in politics. It is hoped that the study will make positive contribution to linguistic study and language education in general, and somewhat support those who are involved in language translation, journalistic writing and reporting about politics in particular.

South Korea's Green Growth Strategy in the 2009-2023 period

Le Thi Viet Ha, Dao Thi Thanh Tra

Abstract: South Korea is recognized as one of the pioneering countries in the field of green growth worldwide. Up to the present moment, the country has successfully built a theoretical framework for Green Growth and completed the first phase of the 5-year strategy (2009-2013), followed by the second phase (2014-2018), while continuing the implementation of the third 5-year strategy (2019-2023). This study provides a detailed analysis of the development and implementation of the national program on green growth across the three strategic phases. The research indicates that South Korea's approach in developing and executing the green growth strategy can serve as a useful model for other countries to learn from and draw experiences.

Overview of the Issue of Racism in America from 2010 to Present

Pham Ngoc Lam Giang, Dang Thi Hai Hang

Abstract: Throughout the history of more than 400 years from colonial times until independence, racism has been a perennial problem in American society. White people have enjoyed special privileges and legitimate rights in society, while the rights of other minorities are overlooked and sometimes stripped away. The post-2010 American context witnessed many changes, notably the COVID-19 pandemic, which further exacerbated racial discrimination. The extent of racism runs from the institutional level to the group level and individual level, as reflected in access to employment; law; and access to public services. Although the government has made efforts to overcome it, it is still not enough as many policies are still "theoretical" and not synchronized from the federal level to the state level, thereby fueling inequality problems between racial groups. This article looked into racism in America from 2010 to the present in terms of current situation, its impact and make some comments on related issues.
